

CODE OF CONDUCT

Introduction

Australian Army Virtual (AAV) is a professional organisation that prides itself on being courteous and approachable by all pilots on VATSIM. In order to achieve this standard members must all be operating on a level playing field and must abide by the Instructions, Policies and Regulations of the day.

Conduct – Junior Officers

1. At all times, be courteous and respectful to other members;
2. Be truthful and honest about your identity and age during the recruitment stage,
3. Complete all training requirements in the allocated time frame,
4. Comply with all Instructions, Policies and Regulations;
5. Comply with all directions given by a senior member in your chain of command,
6. Never share information or resources with people, who are not members of AAV.

Conduct – Senior/Staff Officers

1. At all times, be courteous and respectful to other members;
2. Complete all training requirements in the allocated time frame,
3. Comply with all Instructions, Policies and Regulations;
4. Comply with all directions given by a senior member in your chain of command,
5. Never share information or resources with people, who are not members of AAV;
6. Discharge your duties in accordance with Management Standing Orders,
7. Be a role model to our subordinates.

Conclusion

AAV is an organisation based on good standing and professional members. The policies and regulations are designed to empower senior officers to exercise good judgement to ensure that the organisation stays that way. If we all comply with the codes above we can achieve our desired outcome and have fun doing it.

Joel A. Richters
vLieutenant General
Chief of Army

22 Dec 2011